

Abstract

A method and system of inputting Chinese words to modern computer having operating system and word processing program installed. Said method splits the vocabulary to the traditional division and the simplified division, each of which consisting tiers ranking from common vocabulary groups to supplemental vocabulary groups. Dividing each tier to a plurality of pages indexed and assigned with a plurality of addresses, each of which is occupied by a word sharing related meanings, radical or radicals with other words thereof. Said words are displayed and selected from said computer screen by select means and copied to said word processing program. Said words are relocated or swapped by relocate means for the convenience of the typist.